Section I: Funding Opportunity Description

A) Background

The mission of the Government of the District of Columbia’s (DC) Department of Health Care Finance (DHCF) is to improve the health outcomes of District residents by providing access to comprehensive, cost effective, and quality healthcare services. As the District’s single State Medicaid Agency, DHCF administers the Medicaid program and the State Children’s Health Insurance Program (CHIP). DHCF also administers the locally-funded Health Care Alliance Program (Alliance) and the Immigrant Children’s Program (ICP). Through these programs, DHCF provides health insurance coverage for children, adults, elderly and persons with disabilities who have low-income. Over 300,000 District residents (more than one-third of all residents) receive health care coverage through DHCF’s Medicaid, CHIP, Alliance and Immigrant Children programs.

DHCF has established three strategic priorities to guide the agency’s focus over the next five years. One of the strategic priorities is to build a health system that provides ‘whole person’ care, including social needs that contribute to health (i.e., housing, food security, and other factors). Mounting evidence points to social, economic, and environmental factors as having a profound impact on the improvement of health and the achievement of health equity.

In response, the healthcare system is beginning to address social needs by: 1) fostering collaborations among different provider types; and 2) integrating physical and behavioral health, social services and community supports (e.g., churches, clinics, community organizations, housing and social service supports, educational resources and cultural institutions). Embedding health and social services such as food as medicine programs systemwide is the next step towards sustainably addressing social needs in the District.

A growing evidence base suggests that comprehensive programs designed to improve environments and conditions in which we live, work, learn and play can have greater impact on health outcomes at the population level than programs utilizing interventions aimed solely at individual behavior change. A cross-continuum approach that leverages community partnerships to address social determinants of health (SDOH) like food insecurity is critical to improving outcomes for people with complex needs, while reducing total cost of care.

Specific to food insecurity the need for systemwide approaches to provide produce prescriptions (Produce Rx) to Medicaid individuals with diet-related chronic conditions was highlighted throughout the COVID-19 pandemic. Produce Rx programs are a type of Food as Medicine (FAM) intervention aimed at increasing access to nutrient dense foods. More broadly, the FAM paradigm describes a range of interventions to provide nutritious food tailored to the medical needs of individuals at risk for one or more health conditions likely to be affected by diet. Eligible conditions may include diabetes, stroke, heart disease, certain cancers, and HIV.

As illustrated in Figure 1, FAM interventions aligned with the health system may include medically tailored meals, medically tailored grocery bags or food packages, medically tailored groceries available in a hospital or clinical setting, and prescriptions or referrals for produce. Research also suggests that connecting people with complex health conditions to FAM interventions is a cost-effective way to improve health outcomes, decrease utilization of expensive health services, and enhance quality of life for these individuals who are often socially, as well as medically, vulnerable.

In an effort to improve access to healthy foods and food security, District agencies have consistently prioritized food access and security in Districtwide strategic plans and documents. DC Health, the District of Columbia’s Health Department, whose mission is to promote and protect the health, safety and quality of life of residents, visitors and those doing business in the District, has released two publications addressing food access security:

- The DC Healthy People 2020 Framework (https://dchealth.dc.gov/page/dc-healthy-people-2020) recommended strategies to improve food security including improved access to affordable, nutritious food through full-service grocery stores, mobile markets, and programs that provide financial assistance and incentives for buying fresh fruits and vegetables.
- The Health Equity Report: District of Columbia 2018 (https://app.box.com/s/yspij8v81cxqyebl7gj3uifjumb7ufsw) identified the food environment as a driver of health equity in the district. With 11.1% of the District’s population reported as food insecure, a major part of a healthy food environment is affordable healthy food in the neighborhoods where it is needed.

The DC Office of Planning also released the 2020 Comprehensive Plan (https://plandc.dc.gov) which addresses a wide variety of interconnected social, environmental, and economic topics and aims to build an inclusive, equitable, resilient city. Major themes in the Plan include a systemic approach to access public resources including health, education, and food.

The District’s strategic plans demonstrate that the lack of reliable access to sufficient, nutritious food is a key driver of health outcomes and related costs for District residents. The District has supported a number of evidence-informed interventions to improve food security and food environments in communities experiencing inequities in access to food. This spectrum of services and health interventions recognize and respond to the critical link between nutrition and chronic illness and often uses the aforementioned FAM Pyramid to distinguish food programs such as Produce Rx interventions that have a strong evidence-based and are aligned with the health system.

As a result, growing number of health care payers (i.e., public and private health insurers), providers (i.e., physicians, nurses, dietitians), and health systems (i.e., hospitals, community health centers) are exploring innovative approaches to integrate FAM interventions into care models. In the District, the DC Food as Medicine Coalition has conducted outreach including a roundtable to enumerate specific goals for the District to demonstrate collective impact of FAM interventions and develop a plan to integrate FAM programs into the Medicaid insurance system in the District. Some of these FAM programs have partnered with Medicaid Managed Care Organizations (MCOs) operating in the District while others are supported in part by DC Health. At this juncture, DHCF is seeking to explore Produce Rx as a strategy to scale and integrate these efforts into the Medicaid program systemwide in alignment with the Medicaid program’s strategic goal to improve whole-person care.
Efforts to scale and integrate Produce Rx and other FAM programs can also leverage DC Health Information Exchange (DC HIE) infrastructure. The DC HIE actively supports social needs and clinical-community linkages established through the Community Resource Information Exchange (CoRIE) Project. Established in 2020, the CoRIE Project is a partnership of DHCF, CRISP DC, DC Primary Care Association (DCPCA), and the DC Hospital Association (DCHA) to connect health and social service providers through a technical solution within the DC HIE. This flexible approach allows District health care providers, payers, community-based organizations (CBOs), and other care team members - to screen and refer patients with social needs to appropriate resources. The CoRIE Project included the development of an electronic social needs referral (eReferral) tool with closed-loop function allowing providers to make referrals to CBOs, including those focused on addressing food insecurity. A group of early adopters are now able to use the eReferral tool to make referrals to community resources and subsequently track program enrollment and outcomes associated with those referrals through the DC HIE. The DC HIE’s regional network and social needs capabilities developed through the CoRIE Project offer additional opportunities to strengthen and scale a Produce Rx program, particularly where social factors may be used to prioritize or target enrolling individuals with higher social risks/needs to advance health equity.

DHCF will award one (1) grant of $500,000 to enhance and expand an evidence-informed Produce Rx program to Medicaid beneficiaries. The funds are provided by the federal American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) of 2021. The program, Implementing a Systemwide Approach to Produce Prescriptions for Medicaid Beneficiaries, will give health care providers nutritional tools and access to technology infrastructure to better manage and coordinate care for Medicaid patients diagnosed with a diet-related chronic illness such as diabetes, stroke, heart disease, certain cancers, and HIV. Building on the FAM pyramid, the grant will use digital health resources such as the DC HIE to coordinate services across health care providers, community organizations and government agencies. Overall, the program will support clinical-community linkages by delivering a systemwide person-centered Produce Rx intervention for Medicaid and other public program beneficiaries.

B) Program Description

FAM interventions play an important role in preventing and/or managing many of the diet-related chronic conditions that drive health care costs across the District. Examples include diabetes, stroke, heart disease, certain cancers, HIV, chronic conditions – all of which have a strong dietary component. Applicants will scale a Produce Rx program (a FAM intervention) to meet these needs, designing and delivering a program that supports health care providers’ ability to “write” produce prescriptions for Medicaid patients diagnosed with a diet-related chronic illness as one component of a beneficiary’s care plan.
Components of a successful Medicaid Produce Rx program will:

1. Design and deliver Produce Rx services to eligible Medicaid beneficiaries: Build on FAM model to effectively prescribe and deliver person-centered Produce Rx interventions that serve Medicaid beneficiaries with eligible chronic conditions.

2. Extend Produce Rx referral network/partnerships: Expand or enhance the network of Produce Rx partners to connect patients to food access and nutrition programming. Network participants may include health systems, hospitals, community clinics, FQHCs, produce providers (grocery stores, farmers markets, etc.), CBOs and all District Medicaid MCOs.

3. Strengthen clinical-community linkages using technology: Leverage communication and digital health technology to facilitate network partnerships. The grantee shall use the DC HIE and its social needs screening and referral components (e.g. CoRIE) to implement Produce Rx program services (e.g. screening, referral, follow-up), as appropriate.

4. Evaluate program design and impact: Evaluate provider and beneficiary engagement in the Produce Rx program, as well as the impact on health/program outcomes.

5. Develop a strategic approach to sustain produce Rx services: Propose strategic approaches to more fully integrate the Produce Rx program into Medicaid services and programs, including potential alignment with MCO services.

C) Program Benefit

The Produce Rx program will support providers in managing and coordinating care for Medicaid beneficiaries affected by diet-related chronic conditions to address nutritional and other needs that impact accessing healthy foods and improving health. More broadly this program will strengthen and support clinical-community linkages to facilitate systemwide coordination of Produce Rx services for enrollees/participants across health care providers, payers, community organizations and government agencies. In addition, the grant opportunity will assess sustainable approaches to scale Produce Rx in the District in alignment with the strategic objectives of the Medicaid program.
